BRITAIN'S HONESTY

Minister's Tribute

BRITAIN would be put to the "pin of her collar" to produce the extra goods she would need to send out in exchange for the goods she wanted to import, said Mr. P. McGILLIGAN (F.G.) in the Dail yesterday, when speaking in the debate on the Appropriation Bill. They should not, he said, give Britain a single pound's worth of goods surplus to what she gave this country.

Mr. F. AIKEN, Minister for Finance, replying, said that it had paid Britain to be honest in matters of trade, and to have built a reputation for honesty.

Formerly, Mr. McGILLIGAN said, this country had bridged the gap of £16,000,000 between what was needed in this country and what they could export, by means of the dividends on foreign investments, remittances from emigrants and money obtained adventitiously through Hospitals' Sweepstakes. While Britain was engaged in rebuilding her foreign credit, Eire could not expect that she would at an early date discharge her debts to this country in goods.

The present position, which it had been stated would continue, was that they here were forced to export about £4,000,000 worth of goods above what they received.

The Taoiseach had said that he would not go begging to any country, but he would have to go with his hat in his hand and £3,000,000 of gifts in it to rectify that position.

EXPORT TRADE

So far as exports to countries other than the United Kingdom were concerned, the annual value of these exports for the years 1924 to 1932 was two million pounds, but since 1932 Fianna Fail had reduced them to one and a half millions. This showed that the tendency was to develop trade more and more with the United Kingdom to the exclusion of other countries. Their exports of goods other than live animals from 1924 to 1932 averaged six million pounds annually, but that had been reduced to two and a half millions in the pre-war year. He was no believer in giving the British goods merely on a basis that some day they would be paid for, but he did believe in giving Britain increased trade if the British in return gave this country increased imports.

People were leaving this country in such large numbers and so fast that the Government had to make it a criminal offence to leave the country. But what were they going to keep the people at home for. "We have got to the point," he said, "where the country is a prison house and people can only go out of it on ticket-of-leave."

He understood that schemes already had been submitted to the Government by outside bodies, which went to show that it would pay the Government to advance money at a very low rate of interest to the farmers, and even to offer to remit all interest to any farmers prepared to guarantee a certain per centage increase in production. Although, he understood, the Government had found no flaw in the schemes, they had not thought fit to adopt them.

General R. MULCAHY (F.G.) stressed the importance of money in regard to housing, and said that the question of what money would cost for housing, and the period over

NEW BELGIAN ABDICATION MOVE

King Leopold Advised To "Efface Himself"

[Reuter and A.P.]

BITTER criticisms of King Leopold's actions during the war and his "belief in a German victory" were expressed in the Chamber of Deputies in Brussels yesterday.

According to Reuter, the Government may introduce a motion on Tuesday urging him to abdicate.

Last night King Leopold, explaining why he surrendered the Belgian armies in 1940, said the surrender constituted only a military act and was in no wise political.

KING LEOPOLD "believed in a German victory, and committed so many grave mistakes that it remains only for him to efface himself," M. Van Acker, the Belgian Premier, told the Chamber of Deputies yesterday in Brussels, Reuter stated last night.

In a long statement on the King's position Van Acker said: "I consider that he was not a traitor, but, having believed in German victory, he committed many mistakes."

The House, which met to discuss two interpellations by the Communist and Social deputies, first agreed to refer to a commission of experts a Catholic Bill providing for "a national consultation" on the King's return to power.

The majority of the Chamber, which is against the King, agreed to this as "a gesture of courtesy."

M. Van Cauwelaert, President of the Chamber, called on members to restrain their language and avoid incidents.

"All criticisms of the King can be summarised in a single sentence—the King did not react in the same way as the rest of the nation to the German invasion," he said. "He believed in a German victory. He did not take every possible measure to frustrate the designs of the enemy; on the contrary, he believed it necessary to try to reach agreement with the enemy. This was the essential error from which all the others follow.

"The King did nothing to encourage the rebuilding of an army in England. On the contrary, those close to the King openly disapproved of Belgian officers and soldiers escaping across the frontier."

Of the deportation of young Belgians for forced labour, Van Acker said: "By energetic preventive action the King should have counteracted this criminal design. He let it be carried out."

"ROUGH GENERALS"

Van Acker asserted that shortly before Leopold's deportation he rejected a suggestion that he should escape and become King of the Maquis. While awaiting Allied transport to England he told a personal friend, M. Van Straelen, that he preferred to go to Germany, "because he did not wish to be involved in the bloody disturbances which he felt would follow the country's liberation."

He would prefer to return, he said, when all was over, because the Allied Command would certainly interfere in all Belgian affairs, and he would not be able to bear such interference in his territory. British and American Generals, the King was reported as saying, were rougher and more clumsy than German Generals.

"If the King had abdicated a month ago it would have been done with dignity and calm. The Duke of Brabant would have ascended the throne in an atmosphere of joy. We in the Government had no right to advise the King to return—an act, which would have plunged the country into civil war for a lost cause."

M. Van Acker began his statement with the words: "Of all the countries occupied and ravaged by Germany, Belgium has recovered the most speedily and the most completely. All this is now in danger of collapse because of the attitude of a single man. All who have met the King since his liberation have noticed that he is torn between various influences, which led him to change his opinions several times a day. For a week I waited for his final decision. Each evening he inclined towards abdication, and each morning changed his mind."

Another of the King's actions under the occupation which did him immense harm was his marriage to Mlle. Baels, now known as the Princesse de Rethy.

M. Van Acker said that the King rejected the suggestion that it would be useful if he were placed in a German prisoner of war camp. The King replied that he had been given a comfortable castle in Germany. If the King was not in Brussels as the Allies entered, it was not because he was deported, but because he voluntarily accepted, if he did not provoke, his removal.

Van Acker said the interview which Leopold had with Hitler at Berchtesgaden in November, 1940, was sought by the King and was answered by his sister, Princess Marie-Jose of Piedmont, wife of the Italian Crown Prince. Its sole aim was not the fate of Belgian prisoners and the food situation. The King was the first to introduce political problems, such as the maintenance of the Saxe-Cobourg Dynasty on the Belgian Throne, a German military régime in Belgium and German control of Belgian foreign policy, all of which were to be carried out after the conclusion of peace.

M. Lahaut, Communist, said his party would introduce a motion calling for immediate abdication.

The Government may introduce a motion on Tuesday urging the King to abdicate.

1940 SURRENDER

King Leopold yesterday explained why he surrendered the Belgian armies to the German invader on May 29th, 1940, in answer to a list of questions I submitted, Reuter's special correspondent at Bad Wiessen stated last night. In reply to one question asking "Why did you surrender in 1940?" he stated in a written reply: "There were in a pocket 650,000 Belgians, 150,000 British and a smaller number of French troops, plus civilians and refugees. They fought until all their ammunition was gone. They could not retire as there was only the sea at their backs. This surrender constituted only a military act, and was in no wise political."

After the surrender he (the King) constituted himself a prisoner-of-war, just like the rest of his army.

U-BOAT CHIEFS DENY HITLER RUMOURS

RUMOURS that Hitler and Eva Braun had landed in Argentina from a submarine were denied yesterday by Admiral Eberhard Godt, Operations Chief for the German U-boat Fleet, said an A.P. message from Kiel yesterday.

The submarine U-530 which turned up in Argentina, he said, had left Kiel on March 3rd for a Norwegian port without Adolf Hitler and Eva Braun aboard. Rumours that the pair may have been put ashore in Argentina by the U-boat he described as "wild."

"I certainly would have known if U-530 had been earmarked for any special mission," Godt said. "She left Kiel or a Norwegian port on March 3rd."

This statement was corroborated by Admiral Hellmut, former Commander of the German Cruiser, Hipper, and Chief of the small battle units.

Captain Kurt Langer, Commander of the U-530 until eight months ago, said the craft "was leaking at the seams," and was not considered safe. "Surely if Hitler and Eva Braun were going to escape from Germany by submarine, it would not have been in U-530," he said. "She was not a lucky boat. Her bow was sheared off by and American tanker off the Panama Canal. I was very lucky to return to base. U-530 was built in 1942, she is a very old and worn-out boat, it is amazing that she reached the Argentine."

Commander Heye, formerly commanding the German Fleet in the south-east area, said he was convinced that Hitler died in Berlin. "Otherwise, I would have heard from him.

"I do not believe he could have gone away as an unknown man. If he intended to escape, it would have been by air, not by sea; he did not like ships; he even got seasick on his yacht on the Rhine.

"I say on oath, as a naval officer, that I believe that Hitler would not leave Germany. The Führer could not live anywhere as Mr. X."

Heye expressed the belief that there was an organised movement to keep the Hitler myth alive, and that some Germans—especially those in the Hitler Youth—still hoped that the Führer would return some day.

Commander Heye and Captain Langer admitted that the 1,100-ton submarine could make the long voyage to South America without refuelling, but said there was no spare room on board unless two officers were left ashore. When she last put to sea she was under the command of a young officer making his first operational trip as commander.

Admiral Goot's latest report to British officers show four U-boats still unaccounted for.

Four By-elections

(By Our Political Correspondent)

THE death of Deputy R. Corish, T.D. for Wexford, creates the fourth vacancy in the Dail for which by-elections will be held in the coming months. The other vacancies are in Clare, Kerry S. and Dublin N.W.

In the case of Wexford there seems to be little prospect that the seat, which was held by official Labour, will be retained by them. At the last general election the votes polled by the several parties were as follows:—

Fianna Fail	18,892
Fine Gael	11,274
Labour	6,291
National Labour	8,037

On this showing neither of the Labour groups would seem to have any prospect of success. Fine Gael will probably contest the seat, and, should both branches of the Labour Party combine with them, they could win. Whether such an arrangement can be secured remains to be seen.

There is no indication yet when any of these by-elections will take place. In the case of Wexford the moving of the writ for election, according to the usual procedure, will be in the hands of Mr. Norton, as leader of the party which held the seat.

London Poles Dismiss General

General Gustav Paszkiwitz, Second-in-Command of the Polish Corps in Britain, has, the P.A. Diplomatic Correspondent states, been summarily dismissed from the Polish Army because he has announced that he recognises the authority of the Polish Provisional Government of National Unity in Poland.

His dismissal was announced to him at the express order of ex-President Raczkiewicz.

In Polish circles in London which support the new Warsaw Government, General Paszkiwitz's dismissal is seen as "an attempt by the former Government to intimidate those members of the Polish Forces who are ready to return to Poland."

In many Polish units, it was stated, men are being compelled to state immediately whether they wish to return or not, and those who say "yes" are being sent to special camps, pending embarkation. It is further alleged that certain Polish officers are declaring that men who return will, before they go to Poland, be sent to camps in Russia.

Grain Crops Prices Unchanged

An order by the Minister for Agriculture fixes the prices for grain crops of the 1945 harvest at the same rates as last year.

Wheat for milling purposes 55s. to 52s. per barrel according to grade determined by bushel weight. Barley 35s. per barrel. Oats—not less than 21s. per barrel.

Growers of wheat are particularly requested to note the provision for a deduction from standard price of wheat which contains an excessive percentage of screenings or of moisture. Authorised purchasers of wheat are required to issue at time of payment, dockets which should be retained. These entitle the growers to fertilisers when available at a reduction corresponding to 2s. 6d. per barrel of wheat. There is no restriction on the purchase and disposal of oats, but wheat and barley are subject to the same restrictions as applied to the 1944 crop.

Sweepstake Ticket Dispute

In the High Court, yesterday, Mr. Justice Overend declared that Mrs. Mary McCool, Alberta, Canada, was the owner of the ticket and the counterfoil which drew a horse in the Derby Sweepstake draw in 1938, and was, therefore, entitled to payment of the prize of £530 by the Hospitals' Trust. Mrs. Florence Larkin, of the same place, the seller of the ticket, since dead, had claimed that the ticket was from a book sold to a syndicate.

Proposed Sanatorium At Santry Court

The Minister for Local Government has made a preliminary Order for the compulsory acquisition of Santry demesne and Santry Court, with 222 acres of land, at Coolock, Co. Dublin, for the purpose of establishing a sanatorium there.

JAPANESE CENTRES RAIDED AGAIN

A STRONG force of Mustangs yesterday took up the assault on bomb-shattered Honshu with raids on industrial centres still smouldering from Thursday's attacks by 600 Super-Fortresses.

Their targets were:—Nagoya, Japan's greatest aircraft city; Okazaki, ordnance and aircraft production centre, and Toyohashi.

The U.S. 3rd Fleet is still believed to be roaming off the coast of Japan, Tokyo announced yesterday. It is conducting a baiting scheme, but the Japanese Navy and Air Force are not coming out now, they are "waiting for an advantageous time before they strike."

Current official estimates in America put Japanese naval fighting strength at four battleships—only two of them modern—one battleship-carrier, a few cruisers, about 30 destroyers and a small number of aircraft carriers.

Japanese communications with Singapore have been virtually destroyed, said a British naval spokesman in Washington yesterday, discussing the possible land and sea routes for an attack on the base. "Singapore is in the middle of pincers," he said.

Answering suggestions that the British Fleet in the Pacific is out of date he disclosed that it it much larger than has been made known.

Mr. Soong, Chinese Prime Minister, back from talks with Marshal Stalin, yesterday predicted that the war in the Far East would be over by the end of this year or the beginning of the next. His country's Government would be reorganised at once with a view to post-war developments.

News of the direct British naval air attack on Japan, though well displayed in New York, has failed to quell criticism in certain quarters of Britain's share in the Pacific war, said a Reuter message from New York last night.

The New York Post correspondent, Charles van de Vander, reporting from London the enthusiasm with which the British people received news of the British Fleet's part in bombarding Tokyo, cabled:

"The brutal fact is that Britain's navy is now second-rate—far outclassed by the fast fleet and tremendous naval striking power which the U.S. has developed since Pearl Harbour.

"The British recognise the fact, but refuse to admit it openly. And they are extremely touchy about any reference to the secondary quality of their fleet and the obvious reluctance of the U.S. navy commanders in the past year or so to slow down the Pacific task forces by the inclusion of the older British units."

Coinciding with this report the Hearst newspapers yesterday commented on a "purported undertaking" by the Cunard White Star Co. to convert its "Queen" ships to civilian use.

"Why does the flow of lend-lease always have to be just one-way, and that one way in the opposite direction from the Pacific theatre, in which America is fighting for its life?

"The British have a considerable stake in the Pacific war themselves, and seem to be counting on Americans to do the major fighting there, as was the case in Europe."

Franco's Move To Conciliate United Nations

The formation of a new Spanish Cabinet was announced in Madrid last night. The new Ministers are:

Foreign Affairs—Señor Alberto Martin Artajo (now Secretary of the Council of State and President of Catholic Action), replacing Señor Lequerica; War—General Rafael Davila, Chief of General Staff; Marine—Admiral Regalado; Air—General Eduardo Gonzalez Gallarza, Chief of Air Staff; Justice—Señor Raimundo Fernandez Cuesta; Industry and Commerce—Señor Antonio Suances; Public Works—Señor Ladreda; Agriculture—Señor Rein.

The Ministers of Finance, Interior, Labour and Education have not been changed, according to the reports.

The reshuffle follows the line generally expected in informed quarters in London, writes Reuter's Diplomatic correspondent.

It has been plain for some weeks that the Government would be modified to make it more acceptable to the United Nations, but it is considered unlikely that the United Nations will feel that Spain has set her house in order sufficiently to be admitted to join their company.

General Franco's influence, it is felt, is not likely to be diminished by the reshuffle.

Spanish Republican circles in Paris, says Reuter, are predicting that General Franco's régime "will not last more than 100 days."

"When the moment comes," they say, "the Spanish people will rise and restore the republic."—(Reuter and A.P.)

Holyhead Boat "Leakage"

Dun Laoghaire Fire Brigade was called out last night shortly after 10 p.m. to pump water from the hold of the mail boat. The vessel had arrived from Holyhead on schedule.

Inquiries failed to elicit any information as to the cause of the leakage.

Cloudburst Victim's Body Found

The body of Mrs. Eileen Brock, who lost her life recently after a cloudburst near Macroom, was found yesterday evening at Sullane-Coolcower, about two miles from the scene of the occurrence, by Mr. Dan J. Murphy, a local angler.

Vatican Press on Russia

The Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Vatican, in an editorial declared that the Church could not approve of the Soviet Union, because there was no religious freedom in Russia, and anti-religious propaganda was permitted.—(A.P.)

Suggested Royal Residence in Northern Ireland

In the Northern Ireland House of Commons last night, Mr. W. F. McCoy, K.C. (Unionist, South Tyrone), suggested that an invitation from the people of Northern Ireland should be sent the King and Queen to have a Royal residence in Northern Ireland.

The many demonstrations of loyalty and affection which had been seen this week had been so spontaneous and enthusiastic as to warrant such an invitation, he said.

"Prince" to Run Fleet of "Ducks"

Prince Michael Neale, the new owner of the Saltee Islands bird sanctuary, off the Wexford coast, said yesterday that on Wednesday next, his thirty-fourth birthday, legal details would be completed, and he would formally assume the title, "Prince Michael Neale of the Saltees," thus realising the ambition of his life.

Discussing his plans for the island, he said:—"I am arranging to float a company which will make the Saltees the most unique resort in Europe. I will blast a harbour out of the rock, build a super-hotel, a casino, golf links, tennis courts and swimming pools.

"The climate is perfect on the Saltees. Snow is unknown there. I will have a fleet of amphibious 'ducks' in Rosslare to ferry visitors direct from the Fishguard mail steamers to the island. I will have helicopters for those who prefer to go by air.

"All my employees will wear my own distinctive uniform. I am having a coat-of-arms and crest for all official documents and notepaper. I will introduce my own currency—notes and coinage—having my head on one side and an island bird on the other.

He has just visited Rosslare Harbour to purchase motor-boats.

Six Lost in Lake Windermere

During a half-gale an assault craft capsized in Lake Windermere early yesterday, and an officer and five men of the Royal Rifle Corps were drowned. Three other men were rescued by accompanying craft. The men were part of a platoon from Barnard Castle undergoing special assault training.

High waves were running when the assault craft headed for Belle Isle, a journey of about 300 yards. The rear vessel shipped water heavily, and turned over when about 100 yards from shore. The men's full assault kit hampered rescue operations.

The drowned men were Lieut. Rodney Holt and Riflemen Digby, Richards, Weir, Taylor and Thorpe. All the bodies were recovered.

Because of cable-laying at Crampton and Wellington Quays, the city termini for buses on routes 25, 66, 77 and 82 will be changed to Burgh Quay as from Monday.

Northern Aircraft Workers March To Stormont

SOME 10,000 aircraft workers in Belfast marched to Stormont, when the new Parliamentary session opened yesterday.

Led by men carrying the Union Jack, Stars and Stripes and the Soviet flag, the demonstrators carried a large placard with the inscription: "Full employment. Remember your promises of June 4."

At the gates of the Parliament Building progress was barred by a large force of police.

Eventually a party of the men was allowed to go up to the House, where the Acting Minister of Labour, Mr. William Grant, undertook to receive a deputation.

Mr. James Morrow, Convener of the Shop Stewards' Committee, told a P.A. representative:—"We have no objection to men being paid off provided there is alternative employment. We want the Government to issue a Standstill Order, to operate until such time as there is alternative work. Now there is plenty of work if overtime was limited.

"Hundreds of men were due to be paid off to-night, and the workers are not going to accept their cards. If they are not allowed to go on working, or given alternative work, they are not coming out of the factories."

MINISTER'S PROMISE

Last night Sir Roland Nugent, Minister of Commerce, and Mr. W. Grant, Acting Minister of Labour, received a deputation.

Sir Roland promised that the Government would give full consideration to the points raised. The transition from war to peace, he said, would involve some reduction of employment, but everything was being done to minimise the effects.

Mr. Grant said that the housing and other schemes in hand would provide considerable work.

Opening the new Parliament, the Duke of Abercorn, Governor of Northern Ireland, read the King's Speech, which intimated that proposals to assist the establishment of new industries and the expansion of existing industries towards reconversion to a peace-time footing were being taken in the principal industries.

The speech said:—"With regard to the linen industry, it is my earnest hope that the raw materials which are now becoming available, coupled with a world-wide demand for linen goods, will facilitate the rapid absorption of workers. It is encouraging to learn that a high level of employment is likely in our shipyards for some time to come."

Other points from the speech are:—

PUBLIC HEALTH—A start has been made by the provision of an emergency hospital, to cope with the heavy incidence of tuberculosis. Reforms in health services will be introduced, and a comprehensive measure dealing with water supply and sewage disposal.

HOUSING—The Government fully realises the necessity for improved housing, and the local authorities and Housing Trust are pressing forward with programmes. The requirements of the war will involve continued difficulties, but the Government is resolved that the erection of workers' houses shall be given highest priority. Legislation will be introduced to encourage the building of such houses by private enterprise.

ALLOWANCES—The House will be invited to consider measures for a system of family allowances, a new scheme of industrial injury insurance and an enlarged and unified scheme of national insurance.

Other bills will deal with educational reconstruction, loans to local authorities, the resumption of local government elections, the establishment of wages councils, and amendment of the law relating to shops.

The Speech also referred to drainage problems, and said that the existing laws were being examined in order to ascertain what new legislation would be required to concentrate administration in a single ministry.

Protest Against Message to King

When a resolution was moved thanking the King for his address to Parliament on Wednesday, Mr. H. Diamond (Soc. Republican), Falls, protested. When the last general election for the united country was held in 1918, he said, the country gave an overwhelming decision in favour of an absolute Government for all Ireland. That decision of the Irish people had been subverted by force and hence they had the partition of Ireland.

The alleged settlement of the Irish question had not been sanctioned by the vote of any Irish representative, and, for that reason, the people whom he represented had not taken any part in the ceremonies associated with the Royal visit to Northern Ireland. That was not out of personal disrespect, in any sense, to the King and Queen of England.

Hundreds of young Irishmen were detained in prisons in Northern Ireland for the simple crime of patriotism—which was not a crime.

When Mr. Midgley (Commonwealth Lab.), Willowfield, rose to speak, he was interrupted by Mr. Beattie (Ind. Lab.), Pottinger, and declared: "It is fitting that one Republican should rise to support another at this early stage." Pointing to Mr. Beattie, he said: "This gentleman represents nobody and no party but himself." He regretted that he had "usurped" a seat on the front Opposition benches. Mr. Beattie interjected, "A turncoat." There were cries of "Order," and Mr. Beattie said: "He's your hireling, then, and henchman."

Mr. Midgley—As I was saying, the honourable gentleman belongs to no party. He is a nonentity and nondescript.

Mr. Beattie appealed for the protection of the Speaker, saying: "I have been called a nonentity by this whippersnipe."

The Speaker called on Mr. Beattie to withdraw the term, and he did so, adding "I will substitute another when the time comes."

Mr. Midgley said that, as a democrat and one who had never sold himself to any section of the Irish people, he was proud to associate himself with the resolution.

Colonel Gordon (Unionist), East Down, reminded the House that when they were sworn in the other day the members for Falls took the oath of allegiance.

Mr. Diamond—The oath is compulsory.

Colonel Gordon—Whether or not the member for Falls subscribes to the resolution, he stands pledged to His Majesty.

Mr. T. Henderson (Ind. Unionist) said it was an absolute falsehood to say that the oath was taken by force. "Mr. Diamond," he said, "is as free a man as I am."

Mr Diamond—What about the disfranchisement of the people?

"RIGHT TO BE PROUD"

Mr. Henderson said it was a good thing for Northern Ireland that that had happened. The King was King of one of the greatest Protestant nations in the world. "We Protestants," said Mr. Henderson, "have a right to be proud of the part we played in trying to free the Roman Catholic countries, and for that reason it ill-becomes any man who calls himself an Irishman to oppose the resolution."

When the resolution was put to the House, a division was called for, and Mr. Diamond was named as teller for the "nos."

Members of the Government side were preparing to file into the division lobbies, but Mr. Diamond, Mr. Beattie, Mr. Getgood and Mr. Downey remained in their places.

The question was put a second time, and Mr. Diamond rose from his seat, but Mr. Beattie pulled him by the coat.

Mr. Midgley questioned the right of a member to pull another down, and asked if there was any other way in which the vote could be taken.

The division was declared off, and the "ayes" carried the resolution, Mr. Diamond saying he dissented.

Churchill And Stalin In Three-Hour Talk

REPORTS from Potsdam are still reticent concerning the discussions between Mr. Churchill, President Truman and Marshal Stalin.

It was disclosed yesterday that Mr. Churchill and Marshal Stalin had a three-hour secret talk on Wednesday night.

Mr. Eden has now recovered from the indisposition which prevented him from attending President Truman's banquet on Thursday.

Admiral Emory S. Land, U.S. War Shipping Administrator, has arrived in Berlin with his staff in answer to a summons from President Truman. Lord Leathers, the British Minister of Shipping, is already there.

A flag, which, it was stated, would "fly over Tokyo when Japan is defeated," was hoisted at the headquarters of the American Control Commission in Berlin (formerly the headquarters of the German Air Force Command in Central Germany) in the presence of President Truman yesterday.

The flag was the same Stars and Stripes which was flying over the Capitol in Washington on December 7th, 1941, when Japan struck at Pearl Harbour, and which has since been hoisted at Casablanca, Algiers and Rome.

The President, who arrived in an open car with Generals Eisenhower and Bradley, was also accompanied by Mr. Stimson (Secretary of War), General Patton, Lieut.-General Lucius Clay and Major-General Floyd Parks, U.S. Commander in Berlin.

The President said:—

"This is a historic occasion. We are here to-day to raise the flag of victory over the capital of our greatest adversary. In doing that we must remember that in raising that flag we are raising it in the name of the people of the United States, who are looking forward to a better world, a peaceful world, a world in which all people will have an opportunity to enjoy the good things of life, and not just a few at the top.

"Let us not forget that we are fighting for peace and for the welfare of mankind. We are not fighting for conquest. There is no piece of territory or anything of a monetary nature that we want out of this war.

"We want peace and we want to see the time come when we can do things in peace that we have not been able to do in war.

"If we can put this tremendous machine of ours which made this victory possible to work for peace, we can look forward to the greatest age in the history of mankind. That is what we propose to do."

The "Big Three" spent a musical evening after the State dinner at President Truman's villa on Thursday night. After the American concert pianist, Sergeant Eugene List, had played, Marshal Stalin walked across to congratulate him and drank a toast. Russian and American folk-music then delighted the Marshal, who again walked over to List, shook hands, and asked him to play more.

Later, Marshal Stalin and President Truman had an animated conversation about the folk-music of their two countries. Mr. Churchill asked List to play the "Missouri Waltz," and afterwards also walked over and shook hands with him.

Finally, at Marshal Stalin's request, President Truman, whose mother was a music teacher, played Beethoven's Minuet in G.

General de Gaulle is not attending the Potsdam Conference, it was officially stated there last night.—(Reuter and A.P.)

Mr. Churchill will take the salute from 10,000 troops of the Seventh Armoured Division, garrisoned in Berlin, in a victory parade to be held in the German capital shortly. The date cannot be announced yet for security reasons.

Mr. Eden and Mr. Attlee will be with the Premier, who will take the salute from near the victory column erected by Kaiser Wilhelm after the defeat of France in 1870.

The famous "Desert Rats," the 11th Hussars—the one outfit which has been in all the Seventh Armoured Division's campaigns—and the Third and Fifth Regiments of the Royal Horse Artillery, with their self-propelled guns and motor-towed 25-pounders, will be there.

British Attitude To Irish Labour Split

THE Congress of Irish Trade Unions, comprising fourteen organisations, in a statement last night, gave the replies of British unions to the invitation to a conference to discuss the possibility of the reorganisation as unions with headquarters in Ireland of those of their members in the jurisdiction of the Government of the twenty-six counties.

The burden of the replies, including that from the British Trades Union Congress, was to the effect that the Irish Trade Union Congress (an all-Ireland body) was regarded as the national centre for Ireland, and any necessary contacts were to be made with that body. The Irish representatives of the British unions did not reply. There are forty organisations affiliated to the Irish Trades Union Congress.

The first annual conference of the Congress of Irish Unions will open in Killarney next Wednesday, and will continue for three days, during which the constitution of the Congress will be the chief topic of discussion.

Fifteen hundred Dublin laundresses will be on strike next Monday, unless efforts which are being made to avert a stoppage of work are successful.

Last night several laundry workers ceased work, and the remainder will do so to-night.

An official of the Women Workers' Union referred last night to the case of one of the Dublin laundries, which, although not giving its workers a fortnight's holidays, was giving them an extra week's pay, and permitting the workers to take the extra week if they desired.

Hospitals, hotels and restaurants will be put to serious inconvenience by the dispute. Some hospitals, which have their own laundries, will be able to cater for their requirements. In the event of the strike being prolonged habitues of hotels and restaurants will have to become accustomed to the absence of table linen.

Housewives, with families, will also be sufferers, as it will be almost impossible for them to do additional washing.

Mr. Victor Bewley has offered to act as intermediary between the Dublin Trades' Union Council and the Federated Union of Employers in an effort to settle the impending laundry strike, and a meeting of the two bodies under his chairmanship will be held to-day.

Proposals for a settlement were made yesterday, but they were unacceptable to the Women Workers' Union, and it was at this stage that Mr. Bewley offered his services.

Any proposals made at to-day's meeting will be referred to a meeting of the workers in the afternoon.

The meat strike has not unduly affected housewives. Apart from the Master Victuallers' supply depôts, there is a number of Workers' Union shops to meet the demands of the public. There is no prospect of a settlement, and the only hope of resolving the trouble, it is suggested, is by the intervention of the Department of Industry and Commerce.

A meeting was held last night in support of the men's claim. In a week's time it is expected that the pork butchers will be on strike, also for a fortnight's holidays.

Two Men Guilty Of Conspiracy

In the Dublin Circuit Criminal Court before Judge Sheehy, Noel W. Talbot, Connolly avenue, Navan, and Paul Poynton, Parnell street, Dublin, were found guilty of conspiracy to break into a pay office of the G.S. Railways at Inchicore on January 7, 1943.

They were also found guilty of conspiracy to break into the house of Patrick O'Loughlin and Miss Marie O'Loughlin, 192 Upr. Drumcondra, Dublin, on December 22, 1942, and with receiving £130.

The jury disagreed on the charges of breaking and entering the G.S.R. pay office and of the larceny of £130 from 192 Upper Drumcondra.

The accused men were put back until Tuesday.

"Russia's Veto"

Mr. McGILLIGAN said in the Dail yesterday that England and Sweden had come to a financial arrangement by which kroner would be exchanged for sterling. He had reason to believe that Sweden had said that this country did not come under the agreement.

There was also, he said, a well-authenticated story that Russia had put a veto on this country with regard to timber supplies.

ENDOWMENT Assurance

AN Endowment Assurance provides for the payment of the Sum Assured at the end of a selected term of years or at earlier death.

Endowment Assurance is the only form of purchase by instalments where, should the purchaser die before these are completed, the full capital sum is payable and any outstanding instalments cancelled.

This form of Life Assurance is an excellent plan for providing for old age, and of combining thrift with Life Assurance protection. It is specially suitable for business and professional men, people with regular incomes and those who have made no provision for retirement or whose pensions are inadequate.

The Policies of The Irish Assurance Company, Limited, are the safest and most profitable form of investment available under existing conditions. Assurances may be effected on single or joint lives, under our Non-Profit or Guaranteed Bonus Tables.

The latter provide for the addition of Reversionary Bonus of 35/- per £100 Sum Assured at the end of each year during the term of the Policy. The Premiums are payable either Yearly, Half-Yearly, or Quarterly and Income Tax Rebate within the usual limits can be secured on the payments.

Law and Orders

By J. A. Coutts

Law and Orders. By C. K. Allen. Stevens and Sons. 15/- net.

THERE is no one in Ireland who would not benefit from a perusal of Dr. Allen's latest exercise of that eternal vigilance which we are told is the price of liberty. And it has the added virtue of topicality, for hospital boards, and Ministers who dissolve them, will all hear something to their advantage (as the lawyers say), if they read what Dr. Allen has to say about the history of inspectors' reports.

We are here concerned with the principal problem of democracy to-day: the place of the expert in the governmental system. To place ultimate reliance on the expert is often regarded nowadays as the hall-mark of the progressive. Indeed, Professor Laski's recent assertion to this effect appears to have been one of the major issues in the British Parliamentary election. But the English Constitution tacitly assumes, and the Irish Constitution expressly asserts, the doctrine of ministerial responsibility. It is worth remarking upon this, even if, as is unfortunately the case, neither political responsibility through Parliament to the people nor legal responsibility in the courts to the wronged individual can be stated with qualifications.

The Servant

For political responsibility is owed in practice, not to the people, but to the majority, which may at any time steam-roll a minority into submission. An elaborate Parliamentary machinery has, of course, been devised to render this as difficult as possible, and, on the whole, this machinery has worked well in England. But a perusal of the parliamentary reports of both countries has left at least one reader with the impression that Irish Ministers are not so prone to explain their actions as are their English prototypes. Indeed, a masterly ministerial silence frequently renders the task of attempting to extract information from a Minister as unproductive and unprofitable as that of the man in the story who tried to milk a he-goat into a sieve. It is, therefore, no mere pedantry to remark that "minister" means "servant" and that "responsibility" is derived from respondeo, I reply. We should expect our servant to reply, when questioned; we should expect him to reply honestly, and (since, if not an expert, he is at least the mouthpiece of experts) we should expect him to reply correctly.

Growth of Powers

The growing powers of all governments emphasise the limitations of the legal aspect of ministerial responsibility. It is an individual, not an official, responsibility, and in those few cases in which the citizen can proceed against the State he is met with a barrage of technical advantages which daunt all but the most (one might almost say) foolhardy. It is a responsibility for legal wrongs established in the ordinary courts, but—more and more acts formerly wrongful are now acquiring the cloak of legislative sacrosanctity, and the settlement of more and more disputes is being transferred from the courts to the Government departments. It is with these practical problems of present-day administration that Dr. Allen is primarily concerned. With many alarming instances, he treats of the growth of the civil servant's powers of legislation and of exercising judicial functions. There are many who say that this trend is desirable, and many more who say it is inevitable. But there are still those who attribute it to the war. A very learned judge once remarked that war cannot be carried on according to the principles of Magna Carta. Nor, it would seem, can neutrality. But the problem cannot be explained by the Emergency, for delegation of parliamentary authority dates back to the origins of Parliament. The question is not a new one, and yet it has been found to be incapable of exact formulation. The distinction, for example, between a civil servant's settlement of a dispute in such a way as to further policy, and a judge's settlement in such a way as to further justice, depends upon an antithesis between policy and justice which has so far eluded formulation in set terms.

Survival

Who is to blame for this decay of parliamentary power—Parliament or the Civil Service? Dr. Allen is convinced that it is due, not to some horrid Civil Service conspiracy (such as was smelt out by Lord Hewart some years ago), but to the failure of Parliament and of the people to realise that they are faced with the problem of the survival of representative institutions—a survival which cannot be founded upon the present universal ignorance of the trends illustrated in this book. How, many people, for example, are aware of Dr. Salazar's expressed conviction (which it is Dr. Allen's profession of faith to deny) that in twenty years' time there will be no legislative assemblies in Europe? In this country, it is primarily for Parliamentary and public opinion to realise the significance of what is happening, for to give the devil his due) the Irish civil servant, as an individual, has shown no undue lust for unnecessary Governmental interference. Yet, for the Irish reader, the paradox is that, although this book relates only to the English scene, its message appears to be more important and more urgent here than in England.

OGHAMIC IRELAND

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—In the Irish Times of July 14th, Mr. L. S. Gogan throws some doubt on the correctness of associating Ogham Stones with burials. The fact is, of course, that this association was never based wholly "on literary references," but rather from the first on observations made during field work. Thus, of forty-one Ogham Stones in County Waterford, thirty were found in graveyards; and of the rest, seven are beside ruined structures which were reasonably regarded as church sites or burial grounds. Only four stones had no associations above ground, and, of course, no excavations have been made.

Among the tombstones in Knockboy graveyard, Maol Rati rubs shoulders with Mac Raith and Magrath, its modern equivalents. It would seem rash to argue that there are no "sons of grace" under the sod there; or above it, anywhere, to answer Mr. Gogan's disquieting plea for the preservation of these interesting monuments of the Gael.—Yours, etc.

Sea Stories

The Mirror of the Northern Typhoon and The Shadow Line. By Joseph Conrad. Dent (Everyman's Library). 3/- net.

THIS latest addition to "Everyman's Library" contains the three chief novels written by Conrad wholly within the setting of the sea and ships. It is, however, not the setting as such, but the author's intense power of portraying the relations between humanity, which makes these stories outstanding in the art of fiction. They also deserve their place in this distinguished series.

THE HONEST ORACLE

By Roibeárd O Farachain

Air: Preab 'san ól

'Tis wrong for mortals,
'twas wrong for angels,
to look to lord-it,
to go for sway.
Far better fancy
the natty blackbird,
the yellow-and-black lad
aslant a spray.
But why be speaking
and you not heeding!
Myself I go,
as you know, for sway.
I try with lung and
I try with tongue and I try with sung song
to go for sway.

O money bars us
from living surely;
it make us harder
and cute and dour;
we're better empty
in fob with plenty of heart's contentment
among the poor.
It's idle speaking
and you not heeding:
you know I'd die
to get golden store;
I'd rob a shop or distil a drop or turn cattle-jobber
to get gold go leor.

A woman's head on a good man's shoulder is sign for sense
to rise up and go.
Far better sea-storm
to blow and heave you where only sea-gobs
gape down below.
'Tis great work speaking
and you not heeding:
You know one wink
and I'd let sense go I'd follow after a lip of laughter from Glenmacnass to Glen Aherlow.

O come for wisdom
to me, my people!
I'll give you wisdom
like a silken sea.
Why stint or staunch it,
when you might want it,
beholding all
it has done for me.
'Tis lovely speaking
Is any heeding?
Or am I talking
to only me?
What good is gumption
if its consumption becomes the function of the licensee?

Sing, Wisdom, Wisdom
is a thing so silken,
a thing so silvern,
a thing so grand!
'Tis better wisdom
than trinkets' crystal to glint the rings
on your true love's hand.
But why be speaking and no man heeding
what I my own self can't understand?
You gave up heeding:
I'll give up speaking and spray the spuds on my bit o' land.

The Midlands and The North

By Padraic Fallon

Some Curious People. By Brinsley MacNamara. Talbot Press. 7/6 Net.

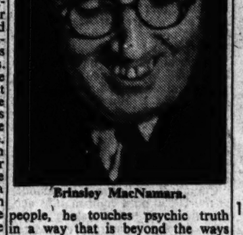
In This Thy Day. By Michael McLaverty. Jonathan Cape. 8/6 net.

TO come in one sitting on two good books by two Irish writers of quality is a rare event. One expects it of Mr. Brinsley MacNamara, whose art is leisurely and ruminative as a village evening, but the calm, restrained art of Mr. McLaverty is a surprise in many ways. Both use country material, and their different methods of treatment make a very interesting contrast. Mr. McLaverty's is the simpler process. He uses realism like a lyric, is content with people as they are, or as they fit into the local scheme of a parish by the sea. One is reminded of an early island novel by Peadar O'Donnell, who had the same simple eye for detail and external stature.

Mr. MacNamara, on the other hand, is much more complex, and where Mr. McLaverty is content to let his people flow together of their own accord, Mr. MacNamara rubs them one on the other till they spark strangely and obscurely. He is not so much concerned with the appearance of things as with the odd personal realities by which some people live. His art, therefore, is literary and naturalistic rather than realistic. He stands outside the community rather than lives in it, and in the same manner he stands outside his people, and puts them under a lens made out of the distortions of his personal vision. What we get from him, then, is not the diary of a community where the stuff of life is simplified to appearances, as in Mr. McLaverty, but something peculiar to himself, something rich in pity and humour and farce, a synthesis of country life rather than a depiction of it, an attempt to get to the very bottom of it by pulling it into all kinds of strange and curious shapes.

Psychic Truth

To do all this Mr. MacNamara has worked out a prose that is as near as possible to the cumbersome speech-rhythms of the flat Midlands, so that his work has the appearance, if not the authenticity, of realism. For the same purpose, he pushes a story outside the limits of credibility, exaggerating everything to get at the outsize fact behind it. This is one way of doing the difficult thing, of expressing what is almost inexpressible, and I think that in "Some Curious People," with its cryptic devices for doubling and trebling the personalities of its people, he touches psychic truth in a way that is beyond the ways of realism. An unusual and very satisfying book.



Brinsley MacNamara.

Mr. McLaverty is no less satisfying in his own manner. This is one of those books that one can fall in love with. People are handled calmly and with supreme gentleness, and yet are as credible as people we meet on any normal day's walk. McLaverty's country is the seaboard near Downpatrick. His theme, a usual one enough, concerns a possessive mother who is socially ambitious for a son thwarted in love. The sight and tang of the sea are everywhere in the book, and seascape, landscape and people all move together in a way that is really genuine and persuasive. I think that in Mr. Laverty all portents point to a large-sized novelist in the making.

India's Problems

An Untouchable Speaks. By R. R. Bhole. Brittain Publishing Co. 6d.

India's Extremists and the Axis. Sir Alfred Watson. Trade With India After the War. Sir Alfred Watson. Brittain Publishing Co., 6d. each.

Gandhi's Congress Party, Great Britain and the East, Ltd. 6d.

INDIA is so permanently in the news these days that it is small wonder that there is a perfect spate of pamphlets on subjects connected with that great sub-continent, the majority written by experts, but all presenting very different political outlooks. "An Untouchable Speaks" emphasises the caste and outcast system, one of the most difficult of Indian problems, and one which has been publicised lately through the Viceroy's reference to "caste Hindus." Even more than the Moslems, the Untouchables and their treatment present a key problem by which the India of the future will be judged. The author, Mr. Bhole, who represents his group in the Bombay Legislative Assembly, is a university graduate and an advocate of note—convincing proof of the capacity of this people.

"India's Extremists and the Axis" and "Gandhi's Congress Party" deal with the temporary aberration of those who place nationalism before all else in the world. Not by such will 300,000,000 people be judged. Sir Alfred Watson is on firmer ground when he writes on "Trade With India After the War," and stresses the need for greater initiative, drive and energy if British economic links are to survive the political ones.

Christians Awake

Prospect for Christendom: Essays in Catholic Social Reconstruction. Edited by Maurice B. Reckitt. Faber and Faber. 12/6 net.

THE sixteen contributors to this volume of sociological essays are Anglicans; they are bound by a common Christian tradition; they share, broadly speaking, a leftish political outlook. To find such a group as this in the established Church of England is no new thing. These writers have not gathered together in helpless panic in the midst of total war, nor are they indulging in any cautious simplist flirting with the Communists. Most of them, on the other hand, have been working, thinking, and praying together for the past twenty years, giving expression to their beliefs in the quarterly known as Christendom. Many of them appeared on the platform at the Malvern Conference shortly before the war, when Archbishop William Temple gave them an outspoken and effective lead. They are the spiritual successors of Stewart Headlam, Charles Gore, Scott Holland, and J. N. Figgis, names which live to keep at bay the cynics within the camp who can only view the Church of England in the rôle of "grand national refrigerator."

The purpose of this book is to encourage the Christians of England, in a society marked either by "impatient materialism" or by "complacent pietism," so correlate their Christian faith and their social thinking. It is true that much of what they write can be found in numerous sociological publications of the day, but the presentation of a survey of so wide a field from such a distinctive and well-defined Christian view point is important and valuable. If the English Maritains—Reckitt, Maritain and Demant—speak to familiar accents in this volume we do not imply that they are boring or irrelevant; although we confess that the opening essay by F. N. Davey, asserting the implicit biblical background of the explicit scholastic theology which follows, struck us as unnecessarily strained and abstruse.

We pick out for special mention a masterly and felicitous analysis of culture by T. S. Eliot; an essay by T. M. Heron, Managing Director of Cresta Silks, Ltd., which tackles the problem of work and vocation in a machine-ridden world in a more realistic way than we have hitherto noticed; a vigorous exposition of the word "nation" by Canon Charles Smyth, who, by an study of the religious roots of Britain and America, points to the subtle differences between these two nations.

Reading between the lines in each essay, one perceives a sharp rejection of the Marxist interpretation of society, coupled with the conviction that the planning of the Mannheims and Mumfords is not enough; for who will plan the planners? The only satisfactory reconstruction must have its roots in Catholic dogma.

Riots and Richness

THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY THEATRE IN DUBLIN

By R. M. Fox

OVER two hundred years ago—in February, 1731—the Crow Street Theatre, in Dublin, started its career as a music hall, where fashionable "Ridottos" or "Assemblies" were held, and Signor Arrigoni, an accomplished Italian composer and violinist, was in charge of the music.

Soon after the opening night a serious riot occurred, in which several people were killed. Soldiers were called out. Shots were fired, windows and lamps of the halls were shattered. So wild was the turmoil that the soldiers had to send for reinforcements. The origin of the trouble was a row between gentlemen's servants and sedan-chairmen. Flambeaux were thrown into the theatre and the melée began.

In 1734, Mr. Springer Barry—whose reputation at Covent Garden rivalled the great David Garrick—decided to return to Dublin and equip the Crow Street Theatre on the same lavish scale as Drury Lane. His position in the theatre assured him of support, and he spent £22,000 on re-building and re-fitting the old music hall, providing seats for 2,000 playgoers. Before Barry won fame in London he had been apprenticed to a silversmith in Skinner Row, Dublin. He had appeared on the stage in Smock Alley in 1744, but that event had passed unnoticed.

Rivals

Barry had a special talent for tragic rôles, in which he was said to excel Garrick. But his career as actor-manager proved stormy. Disastrous rivalry sprang up between Barry and Mossop, his assistant, who left Crow Street Theatre—spurning an offer of £1,000 salary to remain—and took over the management of Smock Alley. Both theatres announced the same plays and tried every trick to forestall each other.

When a popular tragedy, "The Orphan of China," appeared in London, Barry, at Crow street—who possessed the stronger resources—announced that he would play it in original Eastern costumes, with sets designed by the famous Carver. Mossop, at Smock Alley, leapt ahead and produced the play a week ahead, announcing gleefully: "The characters will all be new-dressed in the manufactures of this kingdom." Afterwards it came out that he had ordered costumes from London, but—fearing they would be late—had rushed the dresses from his own theatre wardrobe, ingeniously adding a patriotic appeal.

"Trinity Boys"

Such rivalries were bad enough, but Crow Street Theatre—although under official patronage—had to put up with the hooliganism of "Trinity boys," who, when other excitements failed, arrived in the middle of a play and proceeded to smash up the theatre. Their arrival was usually the signal for the hasty withdrawal of the ladies and the lowering of the curtain. This was the age of 18th-century "bucks," and nothing could be done to stop these outbursts, for it was feared that influential families would be offended if strong measures were taken. Writing of the Dublin theatre of those days, Sir Jonah Barrington remarks: "The playhouses of Dublin were then lighted with tallow candles stuck into tin circles, which were, every now and then, snuffed by some performer, and two soldiers with fixed bayonets always stood like statues on each side of the stage, close to the boxes, to keep the audience in order."

"A Clap for Magee!"

Theatre riots were frequent in 1789 and 1790, when men armed with pistols, bludgeons and old swords crowded into the gallery. They were said to be incited by John Magee, of the Dublin Evening Post, and they indulged in violent demonstrations against Daly, then lessee of the Crow Street Theatre.

"A clap for Magee, the man of Ireland!" they roared. "A groan for the Dasher! Out with the lights!" Actors and audience alike were terrified as they proceeded to smash up the theatre. It was not only the lights that suffered. Mirrors, decorations, seats, hangings—everything was torn and smashed.

During another period in 1814, when Mr. Frederick Jones was manager, there was much disorder. Riots in the theatre began during the performance of "Miller and His Men," and continued for eight successive nights. The Lord Lieutenant—who was present with a party—left the theatre as soon as the trouble began. Immediately afterwards a large mirror, which had cost eighty guineas, at the back of the Vicereigal box, was shattered. Gallery seats were broken and thrown at the lamps. Next evening the mob arrived with cudgels. They battered the boxes and disregarded the conciliatory handbills which the management had printed.

No Apology

On the following Tuesday, during the performance of a comic opera, "The Cabinet," rioting began again. A large canvas placard with an appeal to the audience was exhibited on the stage without effect. The Lord Mayor of Dublin appealed to the audience. But the disturbers said that they would be satisfied with nothing less than a personal apology from Mr. Jones. The Lord Mayor departed to seek out Mr. Jones at once. During his absence brass chandeliers were broken and panels, ornamented with rare and beautiful paintings, were splintered. The Lord Mayor returned with the message that Mr. Jones would not apologise. This news was received with howls of derision, and every lamp, lustre, chandelier, footlight and seat in the house was broken.

Gallery 5/-

The golden period of Crow Street Theatre was during the time when Frederick Jones held the acting monopoly of the city under licence there. In 1807 he engaged an Italian company with the celebrated Madame Catalani. For this show a seat in the gallery cost 5s. Richard Brinsley Sheridan, in the same year, suggested to Jones that he come to London to manage Drury Lane, a proposal which Jones afterwards accepted, just before Drury Lane was destroyed by fire. Jones spent £20,000 per annum on dresses, scenery and decoration for Crow Street Theatre. Among the marvels of the theatre was a mechanical peacock, gleaming with jewels, which strutted about the stage and unfolded its tail. In one play a flashing Roman chariot dissolved in full view of the audience, being built up of weapons for the Roman soldiers. At a given signal, each grasped a weapon, so the chariot vanished. Money was spent lavishly, in spite of bouts of destruction. And, as for salaries, it is recorded that Miss O'Neill—a well-known singer—received £2,000 for a limited number of performances. Her tour yielded a handsome profit.

Connaught Men

In 1819 there was a recurrence of trouble in the Crow Street Theatre, caused by a Connaught faction, who demanded the reinstatement of Miss Byrne—a singer who had been dismissed—on the ground that her mother had been a native of their province. For several nights the battle raged, and no one could hear the voice of her rival above the clamour. At the end the Connaught men won. Miss Byrne signed a new contract, and sang to a packed and appreciative audience.

ACID STOMACH?

"I BLESS THE DAY I FIRST READ ABOUT RENNIES" says Mrs. M.G.

Take Rennies (two) They'll do the trick— And quickly too!

DOWN in the doldrums because acid churns your stomach up! Think that indigestion, heartburn, flatulence, and that sick and dizzy feeling are just too bad, but all you can do is stick it? You're wrong—mighty wrong! Don't put up with it one minute. Get Rennies—they're an acid-taming remedy that sets you right in a jiffy!

And Rennies give you a 24-hour service, every day in the week. You carry them round in your pocket or handbag. They're specially wrapped to be carried loose. You simply suck two or three pleasant-tasting tablets, one after the other just like sweets. No waiting—no running around looking for spoon and tumbler.

In record time the 18 grand, indigestion-defeating ingredients neutralise excess acid. Nausea is no more. Flatulence flies. Pain is ended. Appetite returns with a bang—a real healthy hunger.

Get Rennies today. If they don't shift your indigestion it's high time you saw your doctor about it.

1 "For the past four years I have suffered agonies with heartburn, sickness, and flatulence, after everything I ate or drank. . . ."

2 "Now I don't wait for heartburn or discomfort to start. I pop two Rennies into my mouth as soon as I have finished my meal. . . ."

3 "I recommend them to everyone, as they are simply wonderful. You can take it from me. I bless the day I first read about Rennies."

ACID TESTS

THERE are various ways of choosing an Advertising Agency. One is by the flick of a coin. A second is by the stab of a pin at a directory. A third is by choosing somebody who is the twenty-third cousin of the chairman's aunt.

None of these is wholly satisfactory. Least of all the relationship method—especially when you think of some chairmen you know.

Fortunately there are other and more reliable ways. For instance, seeing what an Agency is doing for other people. Seeing who those people are. Finding out how long it has served them (the ability to hold business is more important than the ability to get it). Finding out what facilities it has for doing the work.

Gladly, on request, we'll tell you how we stand up to these acid tests.

GOVERNMENT NOTICES

EMERGENCY POWERS (CEREALS) ORDER, 1945.

The Minister for Agriculture has made an Order, entitled as above, regulating the purchase and disposal of Wheat and Barley of the 1945 Harvest by authorised Purchasers, and fixing the following prices for Wheat and Barley purchased from Growers during the sale season commencing on the 13th August, 1945:—

WHEAT purchased for Milling:

Grade of Wheat.	Price per Barrel of 20 Stones. s.	d.
Wheat having a bushel weight of not less than 57 lb.	55	0
Wheat having a bushel weight of less than 57 lb., but not less than 55 lb.	54	0
Wheat having a bushel weight of less than 55 lb.	52	0

WHEAT PURCHASED FOR SALE AS SEED: Persons to whom permits are granted to assemble seed wheat may pay to growers for wheat of seed quality a price per barrel not more than 2/6 in excess of the above prices.

Where the quantity of screenings in wheat purchased for milling purposes exceeds 4 per cent., the authorised purchaser may deduct from the standard price for such wheat 6d. per barrel in respect of each 1 per cent. by which such screenings exceed 4 per cent.

Where the moisture content of wheat purchased for milling purposes exceeds 23 per cent., the authorised purchaser is required to deduct from the standard price for such wheat 1s. per barrel in respect of each 1 per cent. by which the moisture content exceeds 23 per cent.

The Order requires authorised purchasers of wheat to issue to each grower a fertiliser (credit) docket containing inter alia particulars of the quantity of wheat purchased.

BARLEY: 35/- per barrel of 16 stones.

The above prices are in respect of wheat and barley delivered to the grower's nearest port, railway station or canal depôt, or to the purchaser's premises.

Where a purchaser takes delivery of wheat or barley at a grower's premises he is required to deduct from the standard price payable in respect of such wheat or barley a sum calculated at a rate not less than 6/- per ton nor more than 8/- per ton in respect of the collection and transport of the wheat or barley.

OATS: A price not less than 21/- per barrel of 14 stones.

SEED WHEAT: The Order fixes the undermentioned maximum prices for seed wheat, carriage paid, to any port, railway station or canal depot in the State:

	s.	d.
Price per stone when sold in lots of less than 1 barrel.	4	4
Price per barrel when sold in lots of less than 5 and not more than 10 barrels.	84/-	78/-
Price per barrel when sold in lots of 5 barrels and not more than 10 barrels.	82/-	76/-
Price per barrel when sold in lots of 10 barrels and not more than 3 tons.	81/-	75/-
Price per barrel when sold in lots of more than 3 tons.	80/-	74/-

CLASS.	SPRINGS. (a) artificially dried.	SPRINGS. (b) air dried.	WINTERS. (a) artificially dried.	WINTERS. (b) air dried.
	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.
	4 —	3 10	4 3	3 10
	84/-	78/-	82/-	75/-
	82/-	76/-	80/-	73½/-
	81/-	75/-	79/-	72½/-
	80/-	74/-	78/-	71½/-

The maximum sale price for seed barley is a price calculated at the rate of 48/- per barrel, with the exception that in case the quantity sold is less than one barrel, a price calculated at the rate of 3s. 2d. per stone may be charged.

The Order also provides that, as in previous seasons, only authorised persons may purchase wheat and barley from growers.

The Order will be placed on sale and copies will be purchasable from the Government Publications Sale Office, 1-4 College street, Dublin, or through any bookseller.

OBITUARY

REV. WILLIAM KANE, S.J.

The Rev. William Vincent Kane, S.J., whose death has taken place at Mungret College, Limerick, was born in Dublin in 1856. He was a brother of the Rev. Robert Kane, S.J., and a nephew of Sir Robert Kane, F.R.S., author of "The Industrial Resources of Ireland."

Having completed his education at Stonyhurst College and at the Oratory School, Birmingham, he studied law in Dublin, taking out the degrees of B.A. and LL.D. He was called to the Irish Bar in 1879. In 1888 he accompanied Sir James Marshall, K.C.M.G., to the Niger Territories as a junior judge, and succeeded him as Chief Justice. He resigned this post in 1889, and, on his return to Europe in the same year, he was called to the English Bar. Two years later he joined the Irish Province of the Society of Jesus, of which his two brothers, Robert and Patrick, were already members. He studied philosophy at Jersey and theology at Milltown Park, where he was ordained priest in 1898. In 1901 he joined the staff of Mungret College, Limerick, where, with the exception of a few brief intervals, he worked until his death. He first taught in the secondary school, later being appointed Professor of Philosophy.

THE SPANISH PROBLEM

Spain, not unlike our own country, always has been a land of paradox. This tradition is being maintained by General Franco at a moment when many of the crowns of Europe either are rolling in the gutter or are in imminent danger. The Caudillo has just announced that he proposes to restore the Spanish Monarchy. This statement was made at a meeting of the Council of the Falange—the Spanish equivalent of the German Nazis and the Italian Fascists. It was not made without qualification. General Franco said that he hoped that in due course the Cortes would examine, and the nation would approve, a law for the restoration of the Monarchy. He pointed out that the monarchical system of government was suited to the spirit of the Spanish people; but if a King should reascend the throne, his return not only must represent the will of the people, but also must guarantee the essentials of the Falangist movement and of Spain's social progress. There is only one claimant to the Spanish Throne. He is the Infante Don Juan, third son of the late King Alfonso. He is the only male member of Alfonso's family who is free from the Bourbon taint of hæmophilia. He was brought up in the traditions of the British Navy, but has been living in Switzerland for some time; and of recent months couriers have been passing to and from Madrid and Lausanne. Don Juan never has been sympathetic with either General Franco or the Falangist Party. So recently as last March, in a public statement, he called for the immediate resignation of the Caudillo on the general ground that his administration did not reflect the will of the Spanish people. There is no reason to suppose that the young Prince's views have changed during the last four months; and General Franco's call for a restoration of the Monarchy seems to be more or less a counsel of despair. The fact is that Spain is in a bad way. Her economic condition is shocking. Politically, she has been completely isolated since the cataclysmic collapse of Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany, to whose stars Francisco Franco had hitched his wagon. Spain stands to-day as the only country in the world that clings to the Fascist idea. Clearly, General Franco realises that he and his Ministers are sitting on top of a powder-barrel which may explode at any moment. He achieved power by means of a coup d'état, which resulted in the Spanish Civil War. This war never would have been won by the Falangists but for the support which they received from the Italians and the Germans. It was, in fact, a kind of dress rehearsal for the world conflict which broke out in the autumn of 1939. The technique of dive-bombing was tested by the Germans at Guernica, to be used afterwards with annihilating effect on many of Europe's fair cities, but to prove in the end, a two-edged sword which, in the hands of the British and Americans, almost obliterated inhabited Germany from the map.

In international politics almost anything may happen at any time. Nevertheless, it would be surprising if Don Juan should accept the Throne of Spain so long as General Franco and his associates remain in power. Even if they should disappear from the scene, it at least is questionable if the Spanish people desire a return of the Monarchy. That issue can be decided only by a general election held under conditions of absolute freedom; and it must be remembered that Don Juan's father was dethroned not by armed revolution, but by a free vote of the electorate. It is quite impossible that any outsider should be able to gauge the trend of public opinion in Spain to-day. All that is quite certain is that the Basques and the Catalans are opposed to General Franco and Falangists as strongly to-day as they were during the Civil War. Furthermore, there is good reason to believe that the Catholic Church is no more enamoured of Falangism than it is of the Marxian philosophy. Consequently, whatever may be the views of the masses in Castille and other parts of Spain, it seems fairly safe to assume that even those who would welcome the Monarchy as a symbol and a prop of social and political stability would hesitate to support a King whose return to Madrid would depend upon his subservience to Falangist principles. The only way in which the problem finally can be resolved is by means of the ballot-box. So far General Franco has shown no desire to take this course. His position vis-à-vis the United Nations is, to say the least of it, difficult. He always has been an avowed enemy of Communism, and during the war he sent the famous—or notorious—"Blue Division," under General Grande, to fight against Russia in the ranks of the German Army. On several occasions during the course of the war, his public utterances made no secret of his sympathies. He met Herr Hitler towards the end of 1940, proclaiming his utter faith in an Axis victory. In the summer of 1941, when addressing the Falangist Council, he announced that the Allies already had lost the war, and announced Spain's solidarity with the German Army, which, he said, was fighting the battle which Europe and Christianity had been awaiting for so long. On the other hand, the fact is that he did not bring Spain into the war. One of the most puzzling mysteries of a unique campaign is the failure of the Germans, after the fall of France, to invade Spain, seize Gibraltar and seal the western mouth of the Mediterranean. There is no doubt at all that with or without General Franco's consent this operation, from the military point of view, would have been reasonably easy. Its success would have prevented the Anglo-American landing in North Africa, and the subsequent invasion of Italy. It is not too much to say, indeed, that it might have assured the Allies' defeat. Possibly General Franco deserves credit for a refusal in those days to align Spain openly with the Axis Powers; possibly not. At any rate, his position now is that he is maintaining in Western Europe a régime that no longer exists in any other country. His whole policy has been discredited. It is hardly likely now that Don Juan will intervene to rehabilitate it.

Dail Adjourns

Mr. Aiken On "Best Policy" For Eire

which the Government would borrow were matters requiring urgent consideration.

Mr. AIKEN, Minister for Finance, replying, said that when Deputy McGilligan spoke of the difficulty of England balancing her international trade books after the war and that she would have to double her visible exports, he left out of account one big factor by which Britain balanced her books prior to the war, and that was the profits she made from being the centre of international finance, and exchange. If Britain wanted to continue as the centre of international finance and exchange she would have to get back to the position when the pound would be freely available to those who wanted to purchase it. That was a factor which made him hesitate to agree that the sterling assets this country had accumulated in London would be worth nothing after the war. It was because that was the theme . . . Deputy McGilligan's speech last week that the Taoiseach and Minister for Local Government had referred to that speech as mischievous. As a result of the immense amount of assets which they had built up they had been able to buy 78 million pounds worth of goods for this country during the five years of the war.

The best policy for this country—and it had been Fianna Fail's policy for the past twelve years—was to produce as many of the goods as previously they imported or to produce substitutes for themselves. They must not allow themselves ever to get into the position again where they were depending solely on foreign imports for their existence. Deputy McGilligan ignored altogether that if the old policy of Fine Gael had been continued they would require twice as great sterling balances to buy absolute necessities to keep their people alive. Fianna Fail had made their people less dependent on imports. He was not pessimistic about the future of the country's trade.

With modern technical knowledge there was the possibility of improving the standard of living if they were enabled to distribute their products. In the immediate post-war years, and for some years to come, their difficulty would not be the distribution of surplus products, but the rationing fairly of a deficit of products.

The bill passed through all its stages.

The House adjourned until 3 p.m. on Wednesday, October 10th.

TRIBUTES TO THE LATE ALDERMAN CORISH

Tributes were paid in the Dáil yesterday to the late Alderman Corish, for 26 years Mayor of Wexford, and a member of the Labour Party in the Dáil since 1921.

Mr. DE VALERA said that it was only a week since he had been among them in his accustomed vigour. Devoted attention to the welfare of his constituents marked Alderman Corish's membership of Dáil Eireann, and he had made valuable contributions to the debates on matters of public interest, especially on local government subjects, of which he had a wide knowledge and experience.

Mr. DE VALERA asked the Speaker to convey the sympathy of the Dáil to the widow and family.

General R. MULCAHY (F.G.) said that Alderman Corish in difficult times, and when delicate decisions had to be taken, had retained the affection not only of everyone in Parliament, but of all those whom he had served so faithfully on local bodies over a great number of years.

Mr. W. NORTON, Leader of the Labour Party, returning thanks on behalf of the party, said that the party had lost a kindly colleague and a wise counsellor.

Mr. J. BLOWICK (C. na T.) and Mr. J. EVERETT (National Labour) associated themselves with the tributes and expressions of regret.

The Ministers and members of the House then stood in silent tribute

At the Wexford Circuit Court, Judge D. Fawcett, Mr. F. O. Budd, S.C., Mr. Pintan O'Connor, K.C., for the Corporation; Chief Supt. Mooney, and Mr. M. J. Dwyer, County Registrar, paid tributes to the memory of Alderman Corish. Judge Fawcett described him as a man of big heart, a true friend and a wise adviser to the people of Wexford.

Alderman Corish's body was removed from the County Hospital, Wexford, yesterday evening, to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, where it was received by the Rev. J. M. Butler, C.C., who represented the Most Rev. Dr. Staunton, Bishop of Ferns.

The coffin was accompanied through the streets by a very large attendance of the people of the town of all classes. Several hundreds of working-men, accompanied by a band, marched in procession.

Irish News in Brief

£850 Settlement.—The Master of the High Court yesterday made a consent a rule of Court under which John McGrath, labourer, Aghadreen, Wolfhill, Leix, is to receive, without any admission of liability, £850, with a sum for costs, from Flemings Coal Mines, Ltd., Ballylehane, Leix, for injuries received when, as a customer of their coal mine, a stack of culm collapsed on him.

False Pretences Charge.—In Dublin, yesterday, before District Justice McCann, Alfred Robert Weston (28), no fixed residence, was remanded in custody on charges of having obtained 30s. by false pretences from Flight-Sergt. R. E. Cusack, of the Australian Air Force, and credit amounting to £16 16s. 5d. from Mr. T. Murphy, Cliff Castle Hotel, Dalkey. The accused man appeared in the uniform of an American soldier.

Ordained in England.—One of the students raised to the priesthood at the Salesian College, Blaisdon Hall, Gloucester, on Sunday last, by the Right Rev. Dr. William Lee, Bishop of Clifton, was the Rev. Thomas J. Ingoldsby, S.C., a son of Mrs. B. Ingoldsby, Gracepark road, Drumcondra.

Pulitzer Prize Play—The prize play, "Hell Bent for Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes, opens at the Gaiety Theatre on Monday next, with Brefni O'Rorke, Cyril Cusack and Meriel Moore in the leading roles. The production is by Shelah Richards, with settings designed by Alicia Sweetman.

Another Dublin Pineapple.—Following the appearance of a solitary pineapple, which sold for 31/- in the Dublin Market on Wednesday, another found its way in yesterday. This sold for a mere 24/-. The first arrival of greengages realised 3/- to 4/- per punnet.

Wages for Threshing.—At a joint conference of the Co. Dublin Agriculturists' Association, the National Agricultural Association and the Workers' Union of Ireland, an offer of 2/- per hour was made to casual threshing workers in Co. Dublin. At meetings of the men it was decided unanimously not to accept less than 2/6 per hour.

Cruiskeen Lawn

By Myles na gCopaleen

THE science which I (Mick Bowled) to term the dynamics of parliamentarianism deserves closer study. A prefatory monogram on the subject—unauthorised by me and to that extent ultra vires—appeared in this newspaper last Saturday. The fault I find with it is a certain confusion as to terminology and I have asked the author of the piece—he is styled "Our Political Correspondent"—to take soup with me to-morrow so that the deplorable business may be gone into in charity and calm. The report, dealing with the allocation of time for the discussion of the nature of a republic (which two dictionaries accessible to me define as "a commonwealth") purports to say:

"Parliamentary strategists have not been slow to detect in the manœuvring which went on a certain amount of jockeying for position. . . ."

There you have no less than three diverse images, viz., strategy, manœuvring and jockeying. It is essentially a cavalry operation—that much is clear—but how could manœuvring go on a certain amount of jockeying?

Nor is that all. It is still more complicated:

"Mr. Dillon's very adroit adoption of the parliamentary tactics of other days at Westminster effectively countered this move. If, however, Mr. Dillon had hoped to have a field day at yesterday morning's session, he was himself checkmated . . ."

You see what we have now? Not only tactics as well as strategy but also chess played in a field . . . . apparently on horse-back! You see what I have to put up with?

A Memoir of Keats

Chapman once embarked on Gaelic studies and explained to Keats that he was deep in researches to find an ancient Donegal verb which had been lost for tens of centuries but which corresponded to a primitive Greek radix which he had come across containing two digammas. Keats disapproved of this manner of spending time and bluntly told Chapman that the quest was like looking for a needle in a haystack. Chapman, however, persevered and after six months jubilantly rushed in to inform the poet that he had at last put his finger on what he had been looking for.

"Rem acu tetigisti," Keats said glumly.

Extract for Americans

"On Thursday, July 4th, America fittingly celebrated the Declaration of Independence of the U.S. . . . that same day two hurling teams from the parishes of Toomevara and Templederry met at the Cross of Ballinamona in a friendly hurling contest. It was a grand game between the young sons of neighbours cleanly but vigorously fought the mastery decisively resting with Toomevara. The Declaration of American Independence as well as the historic battles of the late European war were minor matters in the minds of the contestants compared with their own determined struggle. Its picture is limned in their imaginations and will not entirely fade while life lasts. Please God, it is only the beginning of a series of similar pictures with occasional alternation of light and shade. A pleasing feature of the game was the manifest enthusiasm of so many grandfathers who became young again under the magic spell of the game. It was good for themselves to be there, and better still for the boys, who need the encouraging approval of the patriarchs to keep in the wholesome ways of their fathers."

WEDDINGS

Pringle–Howes.—The wedding took place yesterday at St. Michael's Church, Oxford, of Commander John Pringle, R.N., eldest son of Mr. Seton S. Pringle, F.R.C.S.I., Ringlestown, Kilmessan, Co. Meath, and of the late Mrs. Pringle, and Miss Cicely Mary Howes, daughter of Mr. Justice and Mrs. Howes

Clippie to Augment Ascot Win at Baldoyle

CLIPPIE, a filly by Pay Up, will make her first appearance on an Irish racecourse at Baldoyle to-day. Trained by Victor Smyth, she won the first two-year-old race of the year at Ascot in April, and a few weeks ago she was shipped over here. Incidentally, she was only returning, for she was reared at the Lismacue Stud, in Co. Tipperary, and sold at Newmarket last year to the Anglo-Irish Agency for 520 gns. She has to carry 9-9, but that, I think, will not prevent her beating Lady Behave, Fairhampton, Nannie River, and the lightly-framed Idle Talk.

T. O'Sullivan, who met with great success last Saturday, will saddle several runners, and it is unlikely that he will leave the meeting unrewarded.

Tote Double on Fourth and Sixth races.

Whelan, sharpened up by a profitable bout of flat racing, should produce too much finishing speed for Kai Lung, a brilliant jumper and a very useful horse over this course, in the handicap 'chase.

Quite possibly O'Sullivan will also win the Amateur flat race with the four-year-old Whale Harbour. He is well made and well bred, and has shown promise in his two races this year. Orator is, however, an even better bred colt, and a fortnight ago he ran Sandy to a head at Phœnix Park. He looked very well then, and this time he may appreciate the slightly shorter journey.

So well did Endless run at the last meeting here that he should succeed in giving 13lb. to the improving Dallington in the Baldoyle Summer Handicap; while in the seven furlong race a case can be made out for Golden Days against Arts Ball, Greek Star and Silversol. Hisway, if he stays this distance, is very well handicapped.

The nearest approach to a "good thing" at the meeting is the three-year-old Whitsuntide, in the race for maidens at entry. He would seem to have the beating of his twenty rivals. Selections:—

2.45—Clippie.
3.15—Mylerstown.

DEATH OF PADDY MAHON

THE death occurred yesterday in Dublin of Paddy Mahon, until recently professional to the Royal Dublin Golf Club. He had been in bad health for the last few years.

Dublin born, aged 36 years, Paddy in the period 1932-1939 shed a brilliant lustre on Irish golf, but in latter years, owing to failing health, he was unable physically to maintain the splendid form that lifted him from comparative obscurity in the game almost to the very top flight, as his record in many big tournaments reveals.

When he first came into the headlines in 1932 by finishing second to Hugh McNeill in the Irish Championship at Dollymount, writes J. P. Rooney, he was attached to the Birr Club. The following year he was beaten by one stroke by James Adams at Castlerock. In 1935 and 1936 it was the same story—at Belvoir Park defeated by a stroke by Syd Fairweather, and at Galway in 1936 losing by four to Joe McCartney.

The late P. J. Mahon

WESTERN ISLES CUP

In 1935 he came to Dollymount, and it was to Royal Dublin that in that year he brought the Western Isles Championship Cup, being the first Irish professional to win a cross-Channel title. But that was one only of his several excellent achievements on British courses.

He won the Irish Championship in 1937, 1938 and 1939, and in the latter year brought off a "double" in the match-play Moran Memorial Cup. He had a wonderful run in big British golf in 1937—second in the Silver King £1,000 tournament, second in the Southend £1,000 tournament, runner-up in the Dunlop £500, and third in the Daily Mail £2,000.

In the British-compiled averages for 1937 he was placed second to Charles Whitcombe, but had his figures for a more important event than one that had been credited to him been included in the averages he would have had a clear winning margin over the Englishman. As it was, his average per round was 71.69.

A wonderful player with the wooden clubs and long irons, Paddy Mahon was extremely popular with his Irish and English colleagues.

The funeral will be from St. John the Baptist's Church, Clontarf, this morning after 10 o'clock Mass to Glasnevin.

BRAY COVE SWIMMING GALA

The Bray Cove Swimming Club are holding a gala to-morrow at 3.0 o'clock in aid of the church funds. It will be a club gala, and such well-known swimmers as Des. Corbett, V. Hinds, L. Meehin and G. O'Neill will take part. Eddie Heron will give a display of plain and fancy diving.

JUNIOR OPEN TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS OF LEINSTER,

MONDAY, 30th JULY, to SATURDAY, AUGUST 4th.

Entries Close on Wednesday, 25th July. Entry Forms available at Lansdowne L.T.C., Londonbridge road. —(Advt.)

ST. LEGER DAY DECIDED

The St. Leger will be run at York on the second day of the meeting, Wednesday, September 5th. Other big races to be decided will be the Champion Sprint Race, the Nunthorpe Stakes on the Tuesday, and the popular Ebor Handicap and the Gimcrack Stakes on Thursday.

It is proposed to give £15,000 in added prize money. In every case, besides the stated amount for the winner and placed horses, the sweepstakes money will be divided as 50 per cent. for the winner, 30 per cent. for the second, and 20 per cent. for the third.

MUNSTER MAKE A BAD START

MUNSTER made a very poor start in their two-day inter-provincial match with Leinster at Cork yesterday, being all out for 65 in their first innings, and, when stumps were drawn, Leinster had knocked up 126 for the loss of four wickets.

Five Munster batsmen were dismissed without scoring a single run between them, and Leinster's opening pair, P. H. Waldron and P. A. Warren, passed the Munster total before being separated.

Munster's poor display was mainly due to the splendid bowling of K. Tanham, who took six wickets for 11 runs, S. Jameson, with 23, and N. C. Mahony, with 15, being Munster's best batsmen.

Play will be resumed to-day at noon.

CHAMPIONS ON SHOW AT GUINNESS SPORTS

The Guinness annual sports, which will be held in the Iveagh Ground, Crumlin, to-day, has attracted an entry of over 450, including all the champions and the cream of Irish athletics. With a full 440 yards track in excellent condition, the champions will be able to show their true form, an opportunity which was denied them at Dundalk owing to the weather conditions.

The Guinness "100," which now takes the place of the Tramway "100" as Ireland's premier sprint, has attracted a huge field. Pte. M. Kelly, the 100 yards title holder, will fight it out again with K. Connolly, of Dundalk, and F. L. Flynn, of Celtic A.C., whom he beat into second and third place respectively in the Irish National Championships at Dundalk last Sunday.

INJUNCTION AGAINST A DUBLIN CLUB

In his reserved judgment, given in the High Court yesterday, Mr. Justice Overend granted an injunction restraining the use of the premises leased by H. Williams and Co., Ltd., Henry street, Dublin, to Arnott's Employees' Social and Athletic Club, in such a manner as to be a nuisance to the other occupiers of the buildings, 45-47 Henry street.

An action had been brought by Wolf R. Goldfarb and Ono, Ltd., Henry street, of which he is a director, against the club, for an injunction to restrain them from continuing singing, dancing and music on the floor over his premises so as to constitute a nuisance; and Messrs. Williams and Co., Ltd., had been added as defendants as landlords of the premises.

Mr. Justice Overend said that he would not restrain the defendants in the form asked for; often, nuisance was a question of degree, and, in his opinion, the holding of an isolated dance was very different from holding bi-weekly dances. Again, an occasional concert during reasonable hours might be unobjectionable. He thought that, from first to last, the plaintiffs had been unreasonable. As between the defendants, he was of opinion that, on the whole, the club had used the premises reasonably for purposes authorised by the lease, and, therefore, Messrs. Williams should bear the costs awarded to the plaintiffs. He granted a stay of execution for 21 days.

Main Activity in Rails

MARKETS closed the week, on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday, with business generally restricted. Transport issues claimed most of the attention, with Gt. Northern Ord. and Deb. both 5s. better at 29½ and 91¾, respectively; but the Pref. eased ½ to 46½. C.I.E. Common was quieter, and closed 5s. down at 78¾.

Guinness Ord. units were in small demand, and the price was 4½d. firmer at 149s. 9d. Insurance Corporation dropped 1s. to 30s. Drapery shares were quiet.

Local Industrials displayed a firm tendency, with Batchelor Ord. gaining 6d. to 14s. 9d., and Burke Pref. a like amount to 10s. 9d. Carroll Pref. hardened 6d. to 29s. 6d., as did Irish Cinemas Pref. 6d. to 24s. 6d. British Industrials presented a neglected appearance.

COAL PROFITS

Rickett Cockerell and Co., Ltd., is one of the most important of the companies distributing coal and coke in London and the Home Counties. It was established 46 years ago, and has steadily expanded by the absorption of other concerns, and now has over 270 depôts and offices. For each of the past seven years its dividends have been 10 p.c., and this rate, it is announced, is to be repeated for the year to March 31st last. Profits amounted to £72,427, against £70,680 in the previous year.

LONDON ENDS WEEK ON CHEERFUL NOTE

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT

MARKETS finished the week on a cheerful note, main interest centring in Industrials, which closed buoyant, with the Iron, Coal and Steel section particularly active and higher in anticipation of the announcement of a five-year-modernisation plan for the industry early next week. The high level of bank deposits made a good impression.

Gilt-edged and British Rails gained further small ground, and Foreign Bonds and Rails held the bulk of the week's advances, but with fewer outstanding features. Kaffirs finished on a firm note, following Cape inquiries, and among Oils, Attock were outstanding for strength. Rubbers closed a shade harder in anticipation of Monday's publication of the Malayan rehabilitation plan.

TREPCA MINES

Eagerly-expected news has at last been received by Trepca Mines, Ltd., regarding the property in Yugo-Slavia. A preliminary report received states that no development of the mines has been done since the property was left in 1941. During the occupation period, the mines were worked by the Germans, and, in consequence, there has been an important reduction in the ore reserves, but a substantial ore body remains. The plant and equipment are in a very poor state of maintenance, and the mines are being operated on a much reduced scale by the Yugo-Slav Government. The company has not, so far, resumed management, but discussions to this end are proceeding.

The company owns lead and zinc bearing properties, and has an issued capital of £1,789,028. Substantial tax-free dividends were paid before the war. In the year to September, 1936, 25 p.c., tax-free, was paid, followed by 30 p.c., tax-free, for 1937; but there was a cut to 10 p.c., tax-free, in 1938. The 5s. units now stand around 10s. 6d. each.

TAX BURDEN

Taxation is a very important factor in the accounts of Fisons, Ltd., the group of companies engaged in the manufacture of chemical fertilisers and other agricultural requirements. The profits of the whole group totalled £932,417, against £821,011 in the previous year, but taxation amounted to £574,050, against £460,762. Of this taxation, the parent company bears £366,700, against £176,790 in the previous year, and its net profit is slightly less at £99,047, against £100,546.

The final dividend on the £881,606 of Ordinary stock is to be 7½ p.c., again making 10 p.c. for the year. This rate was paid in each of the six previous years. The stock units have a nominal value of £1, and are quoted at 54s.

The company has an interesting capital history. In 1938 it had in its balance sheet a goodwill item of £459,874, and this, the directors thought, should be partially eliminated. Accordingly, proposals were made to the Ordinary shareholders to approve of cancellation of 7s. 6d. per share from their shares, then of a nominal value of £1. The approval was obtained, and the shares were reduced to a nominal value of 12s. 6d., to be afterwards consolidated in 10s. shares. The cancelled capital totalled £278,262, and, with the utilisation of £81,612 from the reserve, the goodwill item was written down to £100,000, at which it remains.

Immediately prior to 1938, dividends ranged between 4 and 5 p.c. Since then they have been a regular 10 p.c., or the equivalent of 6¼ p.c. on the old capital. The total capital is now £913,770, of which £463,770 is in 10s. stock units. These are quoted at 16s., and thus offer a yield of £6 5s. p.c.

New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, Friday.—The trend of the Stock Exchange at to-day's opening was irregular, and dealings were quiet. Scattered issues, including Utilities and Aircrafts, made feeble attempts at recovery during the morning, although many of the leaders had to contend with further light selling.

The market was gripped by pre-holiday inertia in the afternoon, with the turnover of 650,000 shares—one of the smallest for a full session this year. Selling dried up with the waning of Japanese peace talk, and the trend at the close was irregular. Of the 820 issues traded, 324 advanced and 293 declined.—(Reuter.)

PUBLIC HOUSES SOLD

Messrs. Archbold, Corry and O'Connor have disposed of the following licensed properties recently offered by auction:—Shelbourne House, Bath avenue (£6,250), purchased by Thomas Hanlon; 17 York street (£5,350), purchased by Michael Kelly; 43 Usher's Quay (£3,250), purchased by Richard Kenna; Reilly's, Dunshaughlin (£3,000), purchased by Patrick Robinson; 79 Coombe (£9,100), purchased by Patrick J. Murray; 14 Upper Rathmines road (£8,650), purchased by Philip Kennedy.

Residential holdings sold:—Argyle House, Dun Laoghaire, £2,000; 55 Beaumont road, Drumcondra, £1,000; Dunallen, 67 Iona road, £1,900.

Overcharge for Cigarettes. — For charging 1/2 for ten Player's cigarettes on three occasions, selling them without a permit, and selling a bicycle tyre and tube at an excessive price, John Browne, jun., Gormanstown, Drumcree, was fined a total of £12 at Delvin District Court.

U.S. Chaplain at Kilrush.—Major William S. Walsh, Chief Catholic Chaplain to the U.S. Army in London, has visited relatives at Kilrush, Co. Clare. He was born at Portland, Oregon, to which his parents emigrated nearly half a century ago.

BACON SUPPLIES

Owing to the seasonal shortage of bacon pigs, coupled with the depletion of Stock reserves, following liberal distribution of bacon in May and June, and the abnormal demand for pork and pork products, some curers may be unable to fill their distribution quotas for the present month. All available supplies will, however, be distributed as equitably as possible amongst customers, whose forbearance in the exceptional circumstances is invited.

NEARLY A CRIPPLE WITH NEURITIS

Afraid She Would Have to Give Up Her Work

Great Comfort from Kruschen.

After being nearly crippled with neuritis, this woman was greatly comforted by the relief she obtained from Kruschen. A fortnight's treatment was sufficient to put her on her feet again. And if she keeps up the treatment, she need have no further fears. She writes:—

"I was nearly a cripple with neuritis in my knee and ankle. After I had taken a spoonful of Kruschen in a tumbler of hot water each morning for two weeks, I was able to go for a good walk and also get up and downstairs quite easily. This has given me great comfort, as I am a widow, working long hours, and was afraid I would have to give it up. I cannot speak too highly of Kruschen Salts."—(Mrs.) J. N.

Neuritis, like rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica, is caused by deposits of needle-pointed, flint-hard, uric acid crystals, which pierce the nerves and cause those stabbing pains. Kruschen breaks up these deposits and converts them into a harmless solution, which is promptly removed through the natural channel—the kidneys.

And because the daily dose of Kruschen keeps your inside so regular—so completely free from fermenting waste matter—no such body poisons as uric acid ever get the chance to accumulate again.

Every chemist sells Kruschen Salts, price 1/9 per bottle.

INJUNCTION AGAINST A DUBLIN CLUB

In his reserved judgment, given in the High Court yesterday, Mr. Justice Overend granted an injunction restraining the use of the premises leased by H. Williams and Co., Ltd., Henry street, Dublin, to Arnott's Employees' Social and Athletic Club, in such a manner as to be a nuisance to the other occupiers of the buildings, 45-47 Henry street.

An action had been brought by Wolf R. Goldfarb and Ono, Ltd., Henry street, of which he is a director, against the club, for an injunction to restrain them from continuing singing, dancing and music on the floor over his premises so as to constitute a nuisance; and Messrs. Williams and Co., Ltd., had been added as defendants as landlords of the premises.

Mr. Justice Overend said that he would not restrain the defendants in the form asked for; often, nuisance was a question of degree, and, in his opinion, the holding of an isolated dance was very different from holding bi-weekly dances. Again, an occasional concert during reasonable hours might be unobjectionable. He thought that, from first to last, the plaintiffs had been unreasonable. As between the defendants, he was of opinion that, on the whole, the club had used the premises reasonably for purposes authorised by the lease, and, therefore, Messrs. Williams should bear the costs awarded to the plaintiffs. He granted a stay of execution for 21 days.

NEARLY A CRIPPLE WITH NEURITIS

Great Comfort from Kruschen.

After being nearly crippled with neuritis, this woman was greatly comforted by the relief she obtained from Kruschen. A fortnight's treatment was sufficient to put her on her feet again. And if she keeps up the treatment, she need have no further fears. She writes:—

"I was nearly a cripple with neuritis in my knee and ankle. After I had taken a spoonful of Kruschen in a tumbler of hot water each morning for two weeks, I was able to go for a good walk and also get up and downstairs quite easily. This has given me great comfort, as I am a widow, working long hours, and was afraid I would have to give it up. I cannot speak too highly of Kruschen Salts."—(Mrs.) J. N.

Neuritis, like rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica, is caused by deposits of needle-pointed, flint-hard, uric acid crystals, which pierce the nerves and cause those stabbing pains. Kruschen breaks up these deposits and converts them into a harmless solution, which is promptly removed through the natural channel—the kidneys.

And because the daily dose of Kruschen keeps your inside so regular—so completely free from fermenting waste matter—no such body poisons as uric acid ever get the chance to accumulate again.

AUCTION SALE OF
SUPERIOR, COMPACT, RESIDENTIAL HOLDING, TOGETHER WITH ENTIRE FARMING AND AGRICULTURAL MACHINERY, INCLUDING FOUR TRACTORS AND EQUIPMENT, LIVESTOCK, FOWL, INCLUDING CHINESE GEESE, AND MISCELLANEOUS OUTDOOR EFFECTS.

WILLIAM J. SHERIDAN, Auctioneer, has been favoured with instructions from Captain Michael Montgomery TO SELL BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on the Lands,
On MONDAY, JULY 30th, 1945, at 2 o'clock p.m. (S.T.),
ALL THAT Dwellinghouse, with out-offices and lands, containing 30 acres 2 roods 17 perches, Statute measure, situate in the Townland of Drumgova, in the County of Cavan, and held in fee-simple, subject to the revised Land Commission Annuity of £3 9s. 0d. P.L.V., £16 15s. 0d.

The Dwellinghouse, which is a substantial two-storey slated building, comprises hall, 2 reception rooms, kitchen, dairy, scullery (h. and c.), larder, on ground floor; 4 large bedrooms, bathroom and lavatory (h. and c.), with built-in bath and cupboard, and hot press on second floor. In the kitchen is a new Stanley range with boiler attachment, at present adapted for fire use of turf. but convertible for the use of coal. The water supply to the dwellinghouse is such over the house is from two wells by means of force pumps, thus ensuring a never-failing supply of best water. There is a reserve water tank in the house.

The numerous Out-offices comprise large galvanised coal house, 2 stalled cow house, 2 calf pens, 2 pigsties, slated byre, with tyings for nine cows; iron roof piggery, containing six pens; large three-span hay shed, with covered sides; slated stables, with two loose boxes, coach house over both; small tool shed, galvanised iron cart and turf shed. The entire yard is solidly and suitably concreted and drained. The very fertile garden contains strawberry beds and orchard. All winter greens, including broccoli, brussels sprouts, etc., have been planted, and cabbages and all vegetables in season are at present in plentiful supply.

The Farm is divided into nicely sized fields, with plentiful and never-failing water supply. The following crops are growing on the Lands, and will go with the Lands:—4 acres flax (S.M.), approx.; 5 acres potatoes (S.M.), approx.; 5 acres oats (S.M.), approx.; remainder of Land is in grazing. On the Farm is a large turbary, and at present about 2 acres are spread with mud turf not yet lifted. The purchaser can have the mud turf at a valuation, and if not awarded of same will be sold, and the sale is subject thereto.

The Vendor, since acquiring these premises, has carried out very many and extensive improvements, thus making the Residence most comfortable and an ideal home. The Dublin-Cavan turbo daily omnibus service passes the avenue gate, and Virginia Town is only three miles distant, and Ballyjamesduff a similar distance. Convenient to churches and national schools.

The Auctioneer commends this splendid Residential Holding to any person desirous of having an average size Farm with a very comfortable and well-appointed Residence and excellent out-offices.

If the above property is not sold on day of sale, the Lands and growing crops will be Let on the following day, when Farming and Agricultural Machinery, etc., will be for Sale.

The Residence, which is soundly constructed, of most attractive appearance, is non-basement, and easy of maintenance. The accommodation consists of two large reception rooms, four bedrooms, kitchen, pantry, dairy, modern bathroom and w.c. There is an AGA cooker and up-to-date range in the kitchen. The AGA cooker and supply of anthracite are not included in the sale, but can be taken over on valuation. There is a kitchen garden adjoining the residence. The out-buildings are extensive, and include garage, stabling, two hay sheds, byre for ten cows, piggery, enclosed cattle yard, hen house, fuel shed, sleeping accommodation for two men, large barn and grain loft, large underground shed for storing root crops. The Land is of excellent quality, consisting mainly of large level fields, providing superior grazing, and eminently suitable for tillage. Tillage quota, 37½ acres. Particulars of crops in later advertisements. Most fields have for the past two months been under-grazed; there is an abundance of grass on the Farm.
THIS SALE AFFORDS AN OPPORTUNITY TO PURCHASE REALLY FIRST-CLASS LAND, WITH A COMPACT RESIDENCE, IN ONE OF THE RICHEST DISTRICTS IN CO. KILDARE. P.L.V.: Buildings £15 10s. 0d.; Land £147 5s. 0d. Current Rates, £92 7s. 7d.

LOT 2—HARRISTOWN. Area, 36 acres or thereabouts (Statute measure). This Holding, which is non-residential, is situated about 1 mile from Carnalway Farm, and consists of one large field, well fenced and watered. It is excellent pasture Land. P.L.V., £53. Current Rates, £32 9s. 3d.

Total L.C.A., £121 19s. 6d. Application is being made for a sub-division of the existing annuity on the above two Lots, and the sale is subject to the consent of the Land Commission.
Solicitors: Messrs. BROWN & McCANN, Main St., Naas, and 23 Anglesea St., Dublin.
